COMMUNICATION IN THE CONTEXT OF CONTRADICTIONS OF CULTURE

Kaźmierczak Z. J., Philos. D-r Habilitowany, Białystok

The main point of my paper is that one of the ways to better understand human communication is contradiction. In my paper I will present some important contradictions that can be found in philosophy and religion (in Nietzsche and christianity among others). Persistence of contradictions, particularly of unconscious ones, is the source of difficulties of communication as it creates misunderstandings and an atmosphere of distrust. My paper will present a philosophical stance that will be trying to give an adequate response to this situation.

Contradictions can be found not only in texts but also in human behaviour itself. One of the most shocking one is the contradiction between social nature of humans and their tendency to behave in an egocentric manner. In my paper I would like to discuss philosophical and spiritual basis for diminishing the latter tendency. It would be the purpose of my paper to search for a philosophy and a spirituality that would help to communicate less egocentrically.
