ABSTRACT

Thesis: 68 pages, 86

Keywords: NEOLOGY, CLASSIFICATION OF NEOLOGISMS, STRUCTURAL AND SEMANTIC CHARACTERISTICS OF NEOLOGISMS, WAYS OF TRANSLATING NEOLOGISMS

The object of the work is neologization as a means of developing the lexical composition of the English language.

The subject of the study is the neologisms of the English language in the socio-political sphere.

The purpose of the study is a comprehensive linguistic analysis of neologization as a means of developing the lexical composition of the English language in the socio-political sphere.

Descriptive and comparative methods, as well as the method of mathematical calculations were used as research methods.

The results obtained and their novelty. The following thematic groups of neologisms have been identified: politics and public administration, economics, social phenomena and processes, international relations, etc. It has been revealed that most neologisms have a complex structure consisting of several elements. In addition, neologisms have specific semantics associated with specific socio-political processes and phenomena. Recommendations are offered for choosing the most appropriate method of translation, depending on the structure and semantics of a particular neologism.

The novelty of this work lies in the fact that it presents a comprehensive analysis of the structural and semantic features of neologisms in the socio-political sphere of the English language. The results of the study can be useful for translators, linguists and anyone who studies English and translates texts on socio-political topics.

Theoretical and practical significance of the work. The results obtained can be used in the study of structural and semantic features of neologisms of the modern English language (based on the vocabulary of the socio-political sphere).

The author of the work confirms that the material presented in it objectively reflects the state of the object under study, and all provisions and concepts borrowed from literary and other sources are accompanied by references to their authors.
